CLAY MATE OF THE YEAR

Oh, yesss!!! Saturday Night Live's beleaguered Mr. Bill is ready to be a prime-time player with his own new series

He made his TV debut in 1976, during the first season of Saturday Night Live. Now, the oft-abused Mr. Bill is back to host Ohh, Noooo!!! Mr. Bill Presents (Fox Family Channel, premieres August 15 at 7:30 P.M./ET then airs weeknights at 8 P.M./ET), a new animated series that showcases physical-comedy bits. From the set of his new show, we talked to Mr. Bill (with his creator, Walter Williams) about his triumphant return to TV.

TV GUIDE: What's it like coming back?

Mr. Bill: It's great. I'm still recuperating from all those pratfalls I did on Saturday Night Live, but this time they promise me I'm going to have my own stuntman.

TVG: What have you been doing since SNL?

Mr. Bill: I came out to Hollywood hoping to become a serious actor. I've been taking voice lessons to try to get a deeper voice. I've been reading for movie parts, but it's pretty tough. I've kind of gotten stereotyped as a little Play-Doh guy.

TVG: Who do you hang out with in Hollywood?

Mr. Bill: I hang out with Gumby sometimes. In fact, I bought his old Malibu beach house. And Kermit, Miss Piggy, G.I. Joe and I play cards. We play black-jack, and the last time I said hit me, they really did.

TVG: Who would you like to fight if you were on MTV's Celebrity Death Match series?

Mr. Bill: The Pillsbury Doughboy. We have a little grudge going back a ways. I was mistaken for him and they put me in the oven and baked me.

TVG: What do you like to watch on TV?

Mr. Bill: I like to watch C-Span and CNN so that if any disasters are brewing I can get away to a safe place.

BEACH TEACHER

When 9-year-old Tsianina Joelson made her acting debut in commercials for the "Great Shape" workout Barbie and the doll's Corvette, she had no idea that it was a preview of her TV breakthrough 14 years later. In 1997 Tsianina (Cha-NEE-na—Cree Indian for wildflower) was crowned ESPN's Fitness America champion and offered a real Corvette. Joelson is now co-hosting MTV's fitness series The Daily Burn (weekdays, 7:30 A.M. and noon/ET). The show, taped at the MTV beach house in Seaside Heights, New Jersey, kept her sweating. "We would rehearse for a week, then tape eight shows in one day!"

In November, Joelson (who lives in Los Angeles with her husband, Greg Joelson, a former pro football player) appears on NBC's The World's Greatest Magic. For an aerobics expert, the show could be a stretch, but come to think of it, she's used to that.

NIPPLE EFFECT

Some of the biggest laughs in the new comedy "BASEketball" are for NBC sportscaster Bob Costas. Although he enjoyed making the movie, which features South Park creators Trey Parker and Matt Stone as the inventors of a new sport combining baseball and basketball, Costas, 46, was surprised to find the tone quite different from producer David Zucker's "Naked Gun" and "Airplane!" "It's a lot like South Park," the former host of Later says. "A lot of people laughed heartily at the trailer [in which Costas says to ABC Sports' Al Michaels, 'You're excited? Feel these nipples!'], and I'm always a guy who's willing to poke fun at himself." But, he admits, "I also know that for some people it's not going to be their taste, and they're going to wonder why I did it."

The die-hard baseball fan, whose next assignment is covering the Major League Baseball playoffs, is excited about the assault on Roger Maris's 37-year-old single-season home-run record by Mark McGwire, Sammy Sosa and Ken Griffey Jr. "Anything that gets attention back on the game on the field and away from bickering people in suits is good." —Rich Sands

NEW MAN OF THE HOUR

As a basketball player, if Earvin "Magic" Johnson was in trouble he wouldn't hesitate to dish the ball off to a teammate. So it's no surprise that Johnson, as a new late-night talk-show host, has done just that. "Magic called me," says Tommy Davidson, The Magic Hour's new featured player. "He asked, 'Would you do me a favor and come sit in on the show? Just give me some assist.'" The 34-year-old Davidson has come off the bench in a big way, quickly energizing the struggling show by doing it all: singing and playing keyboards with band leader Sheila E., interviewing guests and even doing a striptease (down to a Speedo)—and that was just in one hour.

Davidson is no stranger to TV, having spent five seasons on In Living Color and starring in last year's Between Brothers. But Magic "is a different kind of show," he says. "We're just going to put on whatever we think is really funny." Despite criticism of the show (notably from shock jock Howard Stern), Davidson is optimistic. "Look, Magic's a basketball player. Keenen [Ivory Wayans] and Sinbad are comedians and actors, and their shows are gone. Some things just don't make sense." —Greg Emmanuel

The good witch

Don't you just love the fact that producer Aaron Spelling, who all but booted Shannen Doherty (left) off Beverly Hills, 90210 because of her atrocious behavior on and off the set, has now rehired her to star in his new fall WB show, Charmed? (She plays a good witch this time.) What gives? The PR spin is that the whole mess was blown out of proportion by the media and that Doherty wasn't fired, she agreed to go. Yeah, right. Don't forget it was Spelling and the cast—not the media—who asked that she leave. The real story: Doherty's name still packs star punch, and being unemployed has probably humbled her. "Everybody deserves a second chance, don't they?" says Spelling. Yep. The moral:

In Hollywood, it's business, not behavior, that matters.

And guess who wants to return to Beverly Hills, 90210? Luke Perry (right), who rode his motorcycle off into the sunset in 1995, has been negotiating with Fox and Spelling to get back to his old zip code. "We've wanted him to come back ever since he left," says a Fox source. (The show could use a big name to replace Jason Priestley, who will bow out in the fifth episode of the new season.) Ironically, Fox did not want Perry when the show was in development nine years ago, but Spelling was so certain of his talent that he paid Perry's salary out of his own pocket.

Coming home?

No big secret

Ally McBeal is getting a new pal—or maybe enemy is more accurate. Australian actress Portia de Rossi (left) of "Scream 2" fame joins the cast this fall. What's her role? "I can't talk about it," she says. "They told me if I opened my mouth, they'd kill me." OK. Fortunately, we've been able to find out that she'll play Nelle Porter, a lawyer who gives McBeal some competition in the boy department. "This is so ironic," de Rossi says. "When I was a kid, I was studying hard to get into law school, and I'd only allow myself one TV show a week: L.A. Law. I wanted to live in L.A. and be an attorney. I never quite made it through law school. But now I get to play [a lawyer]. That's a lot more fun than actually being [one]."

When producers asked Melissa Joan Hart (right), star of ABC's Sabrina, the Teenage Witch, if she'd like to shoot a Sabrina TV-movie, she didn't exactly jump for joy. "I wasn't too thrilled about it," she says. "I mean, I play her all year long. Why would I want to do it during my time off?" So how did they land her? "They said, 'We'll shoot it in Rome.'" It seems that last year Hart went to Florence to study Italian Renaissance art and literature and only got to spend three hours in Rome. "They knew I wanted to go back." Look for Sabrina Goes to Rome this fall.

CHEERS & JEERS

CHEERS to better late than never CBS, which has kept the 1993 AIDS drama "Philadelphia" on the shelf for several years, will finally give the powerful film its broadcast debut August 9 (9 PM/ET). The network reportedly was nervous about the movie's distressing subject matter but has overcome its skittishness. Doesn't hurt that Tom Hanks, the Oscar-winning star of "Philadelphia," is once again making headlines for his critically praised performance in Steven Spielberg's "Saving Private Ryan" and Antonio Banderas, who played Hanks's lover in the film, is hot again on screens in "The Mask of Zorro." No matter. We'll accept any excuse for a raid on the storage vaults if it gives viewers a chance to see this sensitive, moving film.

Koppel revisits prison reports.

CHEERS to weeding out the Melrose garden. Okay, so Melrose Place has never exactly been a tax on the brain cells, but the show was getting more than a little convoluted last season, even by the Byzantine standards of nighttime soaps. Not since Dynasty staged a wedding in Moldavia had we seen more unnecessary explosions and unwanted interlopers dropping by to complicate things, diverting attention from the faces and storylines that made the show popular in the first place. Before the September 14 season opener of the series, producer Aaron Spelling will take some gardening shears to Melrose, cutting cast size and putting the story emphasis back on soapy relationships. Just in time, we'd say.

JEERS to classic omissions. The marketing minds at NBC have decided that promos for upcoming presentations of The Tempest and Crime and Punishment will make no reference to the authors of the source material, a couple of fellas named Shakespeare and Dostoyevsky. It seems the network doesn't want to scare off potential viewers with memories of boring high school lit classes or mandatory reading lists. Call us idealists, but we'd like to think the marketers are selling their audience short—and that viewers wouldn't be put off by the highbrow monikers. While we're at it, though, we'll give a Cheer-within-a-Jeer to NBC for scheduling the TV adaptations in the first place, with or without the author promos.

CHEERS to another network's look at crime and punishment. While we've Jeered television's ever-increasing reliance on economical summertime reruns, ABC's Nightline deserves credit for circumventing the doldrums while staying within the season's budget constraints. Nightline in Primetime: Crime & Punishment is a five-part series airing on consecutive Thursday nights (10 P.M./ET) beginning August 6, in which Ted Koppel and Co. revisit previous Nightline reports on America's prison system, updating the stories to illuminating (if not altogether heartening) effect. The first hour-long installment revisits a 1994 report about a convicted murderer and the devastated families he left in his bloody wake. The case poses some difficult questions about punishment and rehabilitation, and if no easy answers are forthcoming, at least Nightline in Primetime does a fine job of examining the issues.

THE ROUSH REVIEW

BY MATT ROUSH

ANY DAY NOW MAGGIE OH BABY

Lifetime, Tuesdays, 9-11 P.M./ET

We are still a month away from the major networks' fall premieres, but the summer menu of original cable series keeps growing. The strategy is sound: Make noise while the big guys sleep. Sometimes the new shows even seem new.

Look at pay cable, where HBO's harrowing Oz, while not to everyone's taste, certainly realizes its ambition to shock and disturb. Showtime recently took an ambitious swing at outspoken comedy with Linc's, a refreshingly integrated though tiresomely preachy Cheers set in a Washington, D.C., tavern, and Rude Awakening, a self-consciously outrageous and often hilarious character study of a barely recovering alcoholic (Sherilyn Fenn) whose dipso mom (a bravura Lynn Redgrave) would be at home on AbFab.

On the basic channels, the goals can seem less ambitious. USA Network continues to churn out mediocre crime dramas (The Net and the stupefying Sins of the City are the latest) that are barely distinguishable from old network reruns.

Now it's Lifetime's turn to attempt a night of prime-time programming, with a drama and two sitcoms targeted squarely at its core female audience. The results are mixed but beat sitting through another TV-movie in which endangerment leads to empowerment.

While you'd never confuse the two new comedies with a groundbreaker like Molly Dodd (which Lifetime once rescued from NBC), neither would you accuse them of pandering. Judging from rough-cut pilot episodes, these heroines at least have a point of view, as they address milestones in their lives with an unusually grown-up gaze.

Who else would build a show around the 40-ish Maggie (Ann Cusack), a bored wife with an active fantasy life who struggles with her adulterous attraction to a good-humored veterinarian? Oh Baby is even harder to imagine on a major network, its hook being the disconcerting issue of artificial insemination when single businesswoman Tracy (Hope & Gloria's chirpy Cynthia Stevenson) decides to make herself pregnant.

Of the two, Oh Baby is the attention grabber, tackling its clinical subject with breezy verve, using a clever device by which Tracy talks to the camera, with a TV monitor and remote control to fast-forward us through her turbulent life. As her tart-tongued pal, Joanna Gleason adds a zesty counterpoint to Stevenson's winsome charms.

The most problematic yet quietly promising of Lifetime's series is the drama Any Day Now, similar to I'll Fly Away in its shifts between the present day and the '60s civil rights era, as it charts the interracial friendship of two women, played by the gifted Annie Potts and Lorraine Toussaint. The networks have largely given up on truly human drama, so you want to root for it, even when the tone is so earnest it creaks.

So what if Lifetime's new shows aren't perfect? At least they're not ordinary.

Stevenson: Baby makes two.

SISKEL ON SCREEN

CHASING AMY: RACY, RAW & ROMANTIC

In the past two months, four women have asked my opinion of a relatively obscure 1997 film called "Chasing Amy." With "Amy" making its premium-channel debut Saturday, August 15, on Starz! I rented a copy and screened it again. It is a picture worthy of comment, and after a second viewing, my answer to those women is: I continue to like it...a lot.

I must warn you up front that "Chasing Amy" is, appropriately, R-rated for its

BY GENE SISKEL

(1994) featured the same type of frank talk. Based on these two films, Smith, along with Quentin Tarantino, is writing some of the liveliest dialogue in movies today. Holden's monologues of rapture pop off the screen with sincerity. "How seldom it is to meet that one person who gets to you," he says. "I love you. Feel that longing?" Smith obviously believes that young people don't necessarily have to talk like juveniles. I was so touched, I rooted for Holden and Alyssa to reconnect after their rift. In most movies, that's not even an issue, it's a certainty. But suffice it to say that in this movie, no path is obvious.

So yes, I like "Chasing Amy." It has brighter dialogue and deeper emotion than you normally see on the screen with characters of this age.

Also recommended this week is "Picture Perfect," another Generation X romantic comedy, albeit one that is old-fashioned and strait-laced compared to "Amy." Jennifer Aniston stars as an ad-agency worker who, to get ahead, pretends to have a serious boyfriend (Jay Mohr), thinking that the relationship will make her seem mature and reliable.

Affleck, Adams and Jason Lee: "Chasing Amy"

You can almost predict the rest, from the disastrous client dinner to her awkwardness with someone she grows to like. But Aniston doesn't play a dumbed-down character of the kind you would find in most TV sitcoms; rather, her character is smart and spirited. That's because "Picture Perfect" was cowritten and directed by the talented Glenn Gordon Caron, creator of Moonlighting and director of "Clean and Sober."

"Picture Perfect" bows Friday, August 21, on Cinemax. It is a viable alternative to the rawness of "Chasing Amy."

The torture for Holden begins after he has really connected with Alyssa, only to learn that she isn't the sexual innocent he thought she was. Both their courtship and possible breakup are replete with bold, memorable dialogue, written by director Kevin Smith, whose "Clerks" raw, explicit discussions of sexual practices. I wouldn't let my teenager see it. "Chasing Amy" is the story of a struggling twentysomething comic-book artist named Holden (Ben Affleck), who, during the course of the film, enters into his first serious relationship with a young woman (Joey Lauren Adams). Her character's name is Alyssa; the film's title refers in a generic way to the often tortuous pursuit of love.

A year after Princess Diana's tragic death, her legacy of love continues to grow stronger

By FRANCINE PROSE

It's hard to believe a year has passed since that night when our regular programming was interrupted by the alarming bulletin that Princess Diana had been seriously hurt in a car crash in Paris. Her image is still so larger-than-life, so vivid and so vibrant that when we catch sight of it now, it takes a moment to remember—and to convince ourselves—that she's no longer among us. While most memories of the events of last summer have faded, the day she

Memory lane: The opening of the Diana memorial was big news; Diana's wedding gown on view at Althorp which we live. And yet there is something about the life and death of Princess Diana that continues to intrigue us. In fact, her legacy seems to be growing, gaining meaning and resonance in the time that's passed since her death.

Princess Diana TV Keeps Her Candle Bright

The people's princess still (from top): Diana in 1995; fans leaving flowers at Althorp; a temple in Diana's honor died, August 31, has become one of those historical markers—like the death of President John F. Kennedy—that remain engraved in our minds. We know where we were, who we were with and how we first heard the news that came in stages, through the night, each report more terrible than the last.

Since then, so much has happened to distract us, to blunt the intensity of our collective shock and sorrow. Certainly, there have been other deaths, public and private; it's been a year of disturbing disclosures about our most respected public figures, of natural disasters that have shaken our faith in the very planet on Diana has been memorialized in all sorts of public and private ways. Her face adorns a British postage stamp. Sixty-six million dollars have been donated to charity in her name. Elton John's "Candle in the Wind"—the song revised in her memory—continues to sell, and to bring tears to the eyes of its listeners. And Diana is the subject of several new books and at least four TV specials this month alone.

Last spring, during a brief family vacation in Paris, our teenage son was shown around the city by a French girl his own age. The very first place she took him (before the Eiffel Tower or the Arc de Triomphe) was the tunnel under the

Seine where the fatal accident happened. The site had become a kind of altar, at which people left bouquets of flowers, notes and personal mementos.

Just this July—around the time Prince William was asked by his father to have tea with Charles's mistress, Camilla Parker Bowles—a Diana memorial was opened at Althorp, the Princess of Wales's ancestral home, owned by her brother, Charles, Earl Spencer, who spoke so passionately at her funeral to the two billion who had tuned in for the service. Near the lake where Diana is buried—on an island in the middle of the water—there is a shrine known as the Temple, at which visitors are encouraged to leave flowers, letters and cards. In the nearby castle is a series of rooms containing Diana memorabilia: her wedding gown, some favorite outfits, family photos and home movies.

Earl Spencer at the Diana memorial

Twenty-five hundred people bought tickets to Althorp for its opening day, and 152,000 are expected to arrive this summer. The press in Great Britain have grumbled about the place they call "Diana-land", the newspapers accuse it of being as "vulgar" as Graceland. As if there were something wrong with Graceland, or with such pilgrimage spots in general. For Althorp is a place of pilgrimage, and the intensity that will drive devotees to travel there makes it clear that, at least to some, Diana has become a sort of secular saint—a person who suffered and made mistakes, and tried to be strong and do good.

As a modern life story, Princess Di's still seems exemplary: the unhappy marriage, the eating disorders, the love for her children and the personal strength that let her get beyond her troubles and lend her photogenic presence—her powerful image—to the plight of the mine victims of Bosnia and the sickly and poor children of nations around the world. Of course, her death also reminds us of tragedy's cruel preference for striking exactly when things finally seem to be getting better, and of the fact that death comes even to royalty in the most ordinary, unglamorous ways—in a violent car crash.

What struck us as most amazing in the aftermath of her death—and what continues to amaze us—is how, by the time of the accident, a woman whom most of us had seen only on television had come to seem like someone we actually knew. So that her death, and the year that's passed since then, are like the loss, and the slow recovery from the loss, of someone to whom we felt close. A life ends. Time passes. Our grief slowly diminishes, but our admiration and devotion grow. It's an all-too-familiar process that began for us on that August Saturday night when we first heard the terribly serious, gravely worried tones of the correspondent's voice—reporting live, from Paris.

Francine Prose writes for the New York Times Book Review and the Wall Street Journal.

A Month for Memories

The men behind "Gandhi" and Merlin team up for a heartfelt tribute to Diana

In the early days of Charles and Diana's marriage, Richard Attenborough received a letter from Prince Charles. "He said, 'My young bride is so lost and inhibited...in relation to public speaking, and would you like to teach her?'" recalls the Oscar-winning producer and director ("Gandhi") and actor ("Jurassic Park") whom Queen Elizabeth named a lord in 1993. "Of course I said yes! I used to go to Kensington Palace quite regularly." So began a long, close friendship in which Attenborough acted as a "sounding board" and influence for the increasingly confident princess. (She was inspired to get involved in the anti-land mine campaign during a Red Cross fund-raiser at the premiere of his World War I film, '96's "In Love and War.")

Some 17 years after that first letter, Attenborough received another call to action, this one from Robert Halmi Sr., a producer renowned for his blockbuster miniseries (The Odyssey, Merlin). Halmi had an idea for a different sort of project: an intimate two-hour documentary called Diana, to air on the anniversary of the princess's death. "I got tired of all the tabloid Diana programs and thought someone should do something commemorative of all the good she has done," says Halmi, who got his start in documentaries. He wanted to give a forum to those she touched in her life—from homeless women to her best friend—and steer clear of gossip. Knowing of Attenborough's close ties to Diana, Halmi asked that he join him as an executive producer and also narrate.

At first Attenborough hesitated. The director, speaking from the London editing room where he's at work on his latest feature, "Grey Owl," starring Pierce Brosnan, explains that he didn't want to do "the very thing that I despised [in] others. I felt that quite a number of people were getting on the bandwagon and making assertions which I knew were untrue in terms of familiarity and friendship, so I had decided I would just stay out of it."

He was also certain Diana herself would have been uncomfortable with all the hoopla surrounding this Hallmark production. "She would have screamed with laughter, 'Oh Dickie, don't be so silly! All this fuss and nonsense!' She would have been totally staggered by the funeral, not wishing it, you know." What helped convince him to participate was Halmi's offer to give all proceeds from sales of videotapes of the show to the Diana

Diana Watching

Diana is just one of several programs planned around the first anniversary of the princess's death. Expect other shows to announce coverage as well. —SW

Biorhythm: Princess Diana (MTV, September 1 at 10:30 P.M./ET) The half hour show uses music and pictures to tell her life story.

Dateline NBC (NBC; check TV GUIDE for listings) The newsmagazine will focus on Diana's legacy and those who knew her.

Diana: The First Anniversary (MSNBC, August 28-31) NBC correspondents will report all weekend from Paris and London. On August 30 at 8 P.M./ET, Jodi Applegate will anchor a live one-hour tribute to the princess. Plus, Jane Pauley will host a special Time & Again, "The Life & Death of Princess Diana" (August 31-September 2 at 10 P.M./ET).

E! True Hollywood Story (E!, August 30 at 8 P.M./ET) This two-hour docudrama tells Diana's life story through news footage and photographs. E! News Weekend will also keep viewers informed about what's happening in London (August 29-August 31).

48 Hours (CBS, August 31 at 10 P.M./ET) The show will update its June story about the investigation of Diana's death, including the potential obstruction of justice by the Ritz Hotel; also, Dodi al Fayed's butler, Rene Delorm, will take viewers on a tour of the places Dodi and Diana visited together.

This Morning (CBS, August 31 at 7 A.M./ET) While Jane Robelot co-anchors from London, correspondents will report from Paris. Although neither ABC's Good Morning America nor NBC's Today would confirm definite plans at press time, it's likely that both shows will also devote programming to the anniversary.

Memorial Fund and donate $500,000 for a new repertory theater in Diana's name at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London, where she had been president.

But the clincher came when Attenborough scored a first-ever interview with Lucia Flecha de Lima, wife of Paulo Tarso Flecha de Lima, the Brazilian ambassador to England and now to the United States, who was Diana's closest friend. She and Attenborough had heard about each other for years but had never met; he flew to Washington, D.C., to interview her. "Diana had bonded us," he says. The producers and documentary filmmaker Jenny De Yong, who wrote and directed Diana, also talked with such luminaries as Hillary Clinton and the Washington Post's Katharine Graham, along with "just plain common people nobody ever bothered to interview," says Halmi (the royal family is not included in the film). Notes Attenborough, "One of the sweetest interviews is with the girl who made [Diana] up for the wedding; lovely remarks [of Diana's] like, 'Are there many people out there?'"

Quite unexpectedly, Attenborough found making the documentary cathartic. "One feels frustrated because you have profound, enduring love" you can't express, he says, but with this film, "I feel that I have." De Yong, who never met the princess, had a similar experience: "I started off feeling there was a sadness about Diana's life. I finished off thinking she had put her life to fantastically good use and had enormous courage."

Attenborough even provides some solace for all those who admired and still mourn Diana. He recalls that during his final phone call with the princess, just days before her death, "I had never heard her that happy since the marriage broke down. Whether she was having an affair with Dodi [al Fayed] or intended to marry him, I have no idea. I only know that he relaxed her and courted her and cosseted her to an extent that released all her pain. She really sounded very, very happy." —Stephanie Williams

On the anniversary of Diana's death, some of TV's most respected newscasters discuss her legacy and enduring appeal.

Barbara Walters, ABC: "What I find most interesting is the effect Diana's life and death had on the queen, who had to face a choice of keeping the reserve of the royal family and losing the people's affection or opening things up a bit. She's opted for more of the common touch, allowing TV cameras at more and more functions."

How We'll Remember Her

Brian Williams, MSNBC, NBC: "I absolutely think she will be remembered and remain popular in the future. The royal family has been dragged into paying homage to this woman. She softened the monarchy, without their permission. I hope her sons will be the recipients of half the goodwill she received."

Catherine Crier, Fox News: "Toward the end of her life, so much of the focus was on her extraordinary charity work. That work will overshadow the personal stories. I'd like to believe there will be more sensitivity [on the part] of the paparazzi after Diana and [that] that will be a permanent change, but I'm skeptical."

Vicki Mabrey, CBS News: "She's definitely going to be perceived as the icon of this age. She's going to become even more luminous, a '90s goddess—a tragic, flawed goddess. I believe that the princes are not going to be as tormented [by the press and paparazzi] as their mother [was], because the rules are now completely different for covering them. And that's thanks to Diana."

Larry King, CNN: "The fascination with Diana has not dimmed. She would like part of that. She liked attention, she liked the camera; it would be silly to deny it. Her main legacy probably will be in her children. She's always going to live on through them and our interest in them."

Lisa McRee (above), ABC News: "She struck a chord with women because of the tremendous task of self-discovery that she was just embarking on. All of us have struggled with self-discovery—try figuring it out with a crown on your head. Women responded, and still do, to the courage it took for her to be this independent woman, albeit a rich one, of course."

Erin Moriarty, CBS News: "Until Diana, I don't think we realized how much power a celebrity can have when she chooses to do good. That's what people will remember her for, not necessarily for her marital problems and bulimia and all that. Diana will become more of a legend and less human over time. She is already more mythic than real, and I think people need that."

FANCY FOOTWORK

James McDaniel strides skillfully through NYPD Blue while preparing for his next move BY MARK NOLLINGER

So, when are we going to get to see you naked?" Most people would consider that rude, but James McDaniel, who plays Lt. Arthur Fancy on NYPD Blue, is used to it by now. "That's the most-asked question I get, bar none," McDaniel declares over lunch at Hal's Bar & Grill in Venice, California. After all, just about everybody else on the ABC cop drama has bared his or her behind. "They're probably saving it for when my butt drops around my knees," McDaniel mutters with mock bitterness. "But it ain't gonna happen, baby. So I tell [executive producer] Steven [Bochco], if you want to show the dark side of the moon, do it now."

The actor laughs—something he rarely gets to do as Fancy, a quietly intense sort who seems to have weightier things on his mind. But McDaniel pleads guilty when it comes to indulging his sense of humor. "I'm one of the biggest goofballs around," says McDaniel, 40, who has been known to moon fellow cast members—if not the viewing public—during dramatic scenes. McDaniel's best pal on the set, Jimmy Smits, who plays Det. Bobby Simone, agrees. "He's nothing like [Fancy]," says Smits, who will be leaving the show shortly after the fall season begins. "He and Gordon Clapp [Det. Greg Medavoy] keep us laughing. Did he tell you the names everybody has for him? There are a couple of different Jims on the set, so every year he has a different name." Smits cracks up. "This past year he was Mack Daddy."

It's hard to imagine Fancy allowing anyone to call him Mack Daddy and get away with it. "I just think that life has taught him to be very careful," explains McDaniel, who was nominated for an Emmy in 1996. "If you're supposed to count to 10 before you say something, he counts to 20 or 30. I think he sees himself responsible not only for himself, but for his family and his race."

While McDaniel sympathizes, he can relate only to a degree. "We're both black men striving to be successful, so we meet at that point," the actor says. "I think I'm much more accepting. I don't feel the weight of my entire race on my back, even though that's a very large concern with me. My pursuit of happiness takes precedence over that. To have a good life."

McDaniel, who lives in Culver City with his artist wife, Hannelore, and their young sons, Dorian and Evan, has done all right so far. He grew up in Washington, D.C., the younger of two

born to Dr. James

D. McDaniel, an obstetrician, and Miriam, a computer programmer. (His elder sister, Nan, is a barrister living in London.) After studying to become a veterinarian at the University of Pennsylvania, McDaniel dropped out to pursue theater. He arrived in New York in 1980 with $600 in his pocket.

Personally, it was a difficult time: His mother died shortly after his move, and a blowup with his father over his decision to leave school led to their not speaking for years (they have long since reconciled). But professionally, luck was with him, as he landed a Pepsi commercial on his first audition. The spot supported McDaniel for two years while he waited for his next break, which came when his ability to play guitar and harmonica helped him win a leading role in an Off-Broadway production of "A Soldier's Play." By the time he was cast on NYPD Blue in 1993, McDaniel's résumé boasted more than 75 theatrical credits, highlighted by an award-winning turn in the original Broadway production of "Six Degrees of Separation."

A guest spot on Hill Street Blues in the mid '80s marked the beginning of a long and fruitful association with producer Bochco. McDaniel went on to play Officer Franklin Rose in the producer's short-lived musical experiment, Cop Rock, and later appeared on both L.A. Law and Civil Wars. Although enticed by the prospect of playing Fancy, the actor was initially concerned that he was neither old nor experienced enough to pull off the role of boss. Bochco harbored no such doubts. "I can't imagine anyone else in that role," the producer says. "He does so much with so little. He brings context to every moment, and that's a remarkable gift."

But McDaniel still wishes the NYPD Blue writers would give him more to do. "After all we've been through," the actor says, "I would hope they would allow people to see who this human being really is, instead of just seeing him in his workplace. It would make the show better, too." The latter is something that's very much on his mind these days, given Smits's impending departure. "I'll just miss his presence," McDaniel says. "One individual had an enormous impact on the character of the set, and that's gonna change now. That makes me sad." And how does he feel about the addition of Rick Schroder to the cast? McDaniel shrugs, saying, "I don't know him. Being a performer is only one aspect of it for me. Can we talk to each other? Can we trust each other? After all, this is our job. We're nuts about it—that's just the make-up of our cast. That's another question I have: Is he one of us? I don't know."

Just as the show is going through changes, so, too, is McDaniel. "One of the things that I've realized is that I'm not just an actor," he says. In fact, McDaniel seems most excited these days about working behind the camera. He has recently become a producer, having spent his hiatus working on a project about a Navajo girls' basketball team that he plans to bring to the big screen. And this past spring he made his directing debut on an episode of the since canceled FBI drama C-16. "It was the most fun I've had since I've been in this industry," McDaniel says. "It's like making your own jigsaw puzzle."

"When I finally said, 'Action!' I did nothing but laugh after that," McDaniel continues. "Because I realized that all my experiences had led me to this point. I've got a vision for what I'd like to see up there on the screen. And I want to wear any hat necessary to make those visions appear in front of people." McDaniel pauses and smiles. "We'll see." ■

THE AVENGERS RETURN!

The British spy series The Avengers has become a classic. Why? Diana Rigg, who played Emma Peel, says it's simple: "It was an original idea and very cleverly executed." Many fans agree, which explains why this stylish series is back as a feature film and in newly released videos. We preview the movie and chat with the most memorable of the classy couples.

Forget The Man From U.N.C.L.E., Batman and I Spy. To a rabid cult of fans in the late 1960s, John Steed and Emma Peel were the last word in cool, the Scully and Mulder of their day. Mixing witty repartee, swinging London swank and clever crime fighting like a perfectly dry martini, The Avengers battled evil and looked damned good doing it.

Responding each week to the message "Mrs. Peel, we're needed!" the terrific twosome—played by Patrick Macnee and Diana Rigg—outfoxed overzealous efficiency experts, debunked extraterrestrial scams and foiled phony time-travel schemes without ever mussing his Pierre Cardin pinstripes or her kittenish catsuit.

Fans will recognize that formula in the new big-screen version of the hit British series, which comes to movie theaters August 14. This time it's Ralph Fiennes and Uma Thurman saving the world in style, but all the hallmarks of the original remain. Steed carries an umbrella, not a gun; Peel can hurl bad guys over her shoulder with the best of them; neither has lost the taste for champagne, both look fabulous, even under duress. Their relationship? It's still platonic but flirtatious as ever. They remain the most sophisticated of superheroes.

"We were very religious about staying with the original tone," explains the film's director, Jeremiah Chechik ("Benny & Joon"), who grew up in Montreal watching the series on the CBC. "I tried very hard to make what the TV show would have been if it had had the money, the time, the palette and the wideness of the screen." In the new "Avengers," Steed and Peel are pitted against Sir August De Wynter (Sean Connery), an evil Scotsman who gains control of the weather and blackmails the world.

Battling such an over-the-top villain is typical Avengers fare. But the real challenge facing Fiennes and Thurman—who at 35 and 28, respectively, aren't old enough to have watched the show in its first run—isn't a Weather Channel madman. It's living up to the standards of their TV counterparts. The chemistry between the original Steed and Peel was deliciously effervescent, and Thurman worried about assuming a role so closely associated with Rigg, the fine British actress who played Peel. "I don't think I can ever fill the shoes of such a great actress," admits

BY FRANK DECARO

Thurman, who says she was most impressed with "how deeply unself-conscious [Rigg] was, even in her sexuality and sensuality." Compared to playing Poison Ivy in "Batman & Robin," Thurman's last costumed adventure flick, she says Peel is much more subtle. "It's not femme fatale, bat your eyes and toss your hair around. She's witty, smart and doesn't work really hard at it at all."

Fiennes clearly decided to borrow the best of his predecessor's work and start from there. As well he might: Macnee became synonymous with Steed, playing him from the early 1960s to the late 1970s opposite various sexy sidekicks, including Bond girl Honor Blackman and Joanna Lumley, who later was Patsy Stone on the hit British sitcom Absolutely Fabulous. "I didn't want to reinvent the character," Fiennes says. "The whole point of Steed is that he's not modern. He is the quintessential English city gent. I think people find that savoir faire and nonchalance attractive in a hero."

It is a '90s adventure, though, and that made for a grueling shoot last year in England. "I have newfound respect for actors who do action pictures," says Thurman, who is best known for her Academy Award-nominated performance in "Pulp Fiction." "It was weeks of

Avenging Originals

Thanks to the hoopla generated by the big-screen "Avengers" movie, A&E Home Video has released a dozen episodes of the original TV series on tape. Marketed as the The Avengers '67, the two boxed sets ($29.95 each) contain digitally remastered episodes from season five, the first full year it aired in the U.S. and its first season in color. Although the stylish series had been shown in its homeland in various versions since 1961, A&E has chosen to start with the best-known episodes of the series, which joined Patrick Macnee's John Steed with Diana Rigg's Emma Peel.

Highlights of the initial releases have Steed and Peel uncovering a plot to drive businessmen mad in "The Fear Merchants," racing to clip the wings of a villain who uses carrier pigeons for treacherous purposes in "The Bird Who Knew Too Much" and infiltrating the secret British Venusian Society in "From Venus With Love." Included in the second boxed set is a send-up of "The Magnificent Seven" called "The Superlative Seven," featuring a young Donald Sutherland, and "The Hidden Tiger" with dialogue dripping in feline innuendo and titillating double entendres. (Single cassettes of two episodes are available at $12.95.) Six more episodes, including fan favorite "Something Nasty in the Nursery," are set for a September release. A fourth boxed set is due next spring, with subsequent releases of more shows—in color and black and white, with and without Rigg—planned for later in 1999. —FDC

Why cheat?

When using regular (R) insulin, you should usually wait at least 30 minutes before eating.

When now, it's OK to dose & eat!

Only one insulin works to let you dose and eat immediately! It's called Humalog.

- Since Humalog's introduction in 1996, people with diabetes have been discovering its benefits: Convenience, Control and Flexibility—especially at mealtimes.
- With Humalog you can dose and eat because it's absorbed so quickly. That's why you should take it within 15 minutes before your meal.
- Because it's a rapid-acting insulin, it should be used with a longer-acting insulin. Humalog leaves the body sooner, so you may need to adjust your longer-acting insulin for optimal blood sugar control.

- Potential side effects associated with the use of all insulins include low blood sugar, weight gain, low blood potassium, changes in fat tissue at the site of injection, and allergic reactions, both general and local. Remember, starting or changing insulin therapy should be done cautiously and only under your doctor's supervision.

- Take this ad to your doctor and discuss how Humalog can make a difference in your life. Humalog is available by prescription only. Please see the product information that follows for more details.

Humalog® insulin lispro injection (rDNA origin)

Brief Summary: Please consult package insert for complete prescribing information.

INDICATIONS AND USAGE: Humalog is an insulin analog that is indicated in the treatment of patients with diabetes mellitus for the control of hyperglycemia. Humalog has a more rapid onset and a shorter duration of action than human regular insulin. Therefore, Humalog should be used in regimens including a longer-acting insulin.

CONTRAINDICATIONS: Humalog is contraindicated during episodes of hypoglycemia and in patients sensitive to Humalog or one of its excipients.

WARNINGS: This human insulin analog differs from human regular insulin by its rapid onset of action as well as a shorter duration of activity. When used as a mealtime insulin, the dose of Humalog should be given within 15 minutes before the meal. Because of the short duration of action of Humalog, patients with type 1 diabetes also require a longer-acting insulin to maintain glucose control.

Hypoglycemia is the most common adverse effect of insulins, including Humalog. As with all insulins, the timing of hypoglycemia may differ among various insulin formulations. Glucose monitoring is recommended for all patients with diabetes.

PRECAUTIONS: General—Hypoglycemia, hypokalemia, lipodystrophy, and hypersensitivity are among the potential clinical adverse effects associated with the use of all insulins. Because of differences in the action of Humalog and other insulins, care should be taken in patients in whom such potential side effects might be clinically relevant (e.g., patients who are fasting, have autonomic neuropathy, or are using potassium-lowering drugs).

As with all insulin preparations, the time course of Humalog action may vary in different individuals or at different times in the same individual and is dependent on site of injection, blood supply, temperature, and physical activity.

Adjustment of dosage of any insulin may be necessary if patients change their physical activity or their usual meal plan. Insulin requirements may be altered during illness, emotional disturbances, or other stress.

Hypoglycemia—As with all insulin preparations, hypoglycemic reactions may be associated with the administration of Humalog. Rapid changes in serum glucose levels may induce symptoms of hypoglycemia in persons with diabetes, regardless of the glucose value. Early warning symptoms of hypoglycemia may be different or less pronounced under certain conditions, such as long duration of diabetes, diabetic nerve disease, use of medications such as beta-blockers, or intensified diabetes control.

Renal and Hepatic Impairment—Although there are no specific data in patients with diabetes, Humalog requirements may be reduced in the presence of renal or hepatic impairment, similar to observations found with other insulins.

Allergy—Local Allergy—Patients occasionally experience redness, swelling, or itching at the site of injection. This condition, called local allergy, usually clears up in a few days to a few weeks. In some instances, this condition may be related to factors other than insulin, such as irritants in a skin cleansing agent or poor injection technique.

Systemic Allergy—Less common, but potentially more serious, is generalized allergy to insulin, which may cause rash over the whole body, shortness of breath, wheezing, reduction in blood pressure, rapid pulse, or sweating. Severe cases of generalized allergy, including anaphylactic reaction, may be life threatening. If patients think they are having such a reaction, they should notify a doctor immediately.

Antibody Production—In large clinical trials, antibodies that cross react with human insulin and insulin lispro were observed in both Humulin R- and Humalog-treatment groups. As expected, the largest increase in the antibody levels during the 12 month clinical trials was observed with patients new to insulin therapy.

Information for Patients—Patients should be informed of the potential risks and advantages of Humalog and alternative therapies. Patients should also be informed about the importance of proper insulin storage, injection technique, timing of dosage, adherence to meal planning, regular physical activity, regular blood glucose monitoring, periodic glycosylated hemoglobin testing, recognition and management of hypo- and hyperglycemia, and periodic assessment for diabetes complications.

Patients should be advised to inform their physician if they are pregnant or intend to become pregnant.

Refer patients to the Information for the Patient circular for information on proper injection technique, timing of Humalog dosing (≤ 15 minutes before a meal), storing and mixing insulin, and common adverse effects.

Laboratory Tests—As with all insulins, the therapeutic response to Humalog should be monitored by periodic blood glucose tests. Periodic measurement of glycosylated hemoglobin is recommended for the monitoring of long-term glycemic control.

Drug Interactions—Insulin requirements may be increased by medications with hyperglycemic activity such as corticosteroids, isoniazid, certain lipid lowering drugs (e.g., niacin), estrogens, oral contraceptives, phenothiazines, and thyroid replacement therapy.

Insulin requirements may be decreased in the presence of drugs with hypoglycemic activity, such as oral hypoglycemic agents, salicylates, sulfa antibiotics, and certain antidepressants (monoamine oxidase inhibitors), certain angiotensin converting enzyme inhibitors, beta-adrenergic blockers, inhibitors of pancreatic function (e.g., octreotide), and alcohol. Beta-adrenergic blockers may mask the symptoms of hypoglycemia in some patients.

Mixing of Insulins—Care should be taken when mixing all insulins as a change in peak action may occur. A decrease in the absorption rate, but not total bioavailability, was seen when Humalog was mixed with Humulin N. This decrease in absorption rate was not seen when Humalog was mixed with Humulin U. When Humalog is mixed with either Humulin U or Humulin N, the mixture should be given within 15 minutes before a meal.

If Humalog is mixed with a longer-acting insulin, Humalog should be drawn into the syringe first to prevent clouding of the Humalog by the longer-acting insulin. Injection should be made immediately after mixing. Mixtures should not be administered intravenously.

Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis, Impairment of Fertility—Long-term studies in animals have not been performed to evaluate the carcinogenic potential of Humalog. Humalog was not mutagenic in a battery of in vitro and in vivo genetic toxicity assays (bacterial mutation tests, unscheduled DNA synthesis, mouse lymphoma assay, chromosomal aberration tests, and a micronucleus test). There is no evidence from animal studies of Humalog-induced impairment of fertility.

Pregnancy—Teratogenic Effects—Pregnancy Category B—Reproduction studies have been performed in pregnant rats and rabbits at parenteral doses up to 4 and 0.3 times, respectively, the average human dose (40 units/day) based on body surface area. The results have revealed no evidence of impaired fertility or harm to the fetus due to Humalog. There are, however, no adequate and well-controlled studies in pregnant women. Because animal reproduction studies are not always predictive of human response, this drug should be used during pregnancy only if clearly needed.

Although there are no clinical studies of the use of Humalog in pregnancy, published studies with human insulins suggest that optimizing overall glycemic control, including postprandial control, before conception and during pregnancy improves fetal outcome. Although the fetal complications of maternal hyperglycemia have been well documented, fetal toxicity also has been reported with maternal hypoglycemia. Insulin requirements usually fall during the first trimester and increase during the second and third trimesters. Careful monitoring of the patient is required throughout pregnancy. During the perinatal period, careful monitoring of infants born to mothers with diabetes is warranted.

Nursing Mothers—It is unknown whether Humalog is excreted in significant amounts in human milk. Many drugs, including human insulin, are excreted in human milk. For this reason, caution should be exercised when Humalog is administered to a nursing woman. Patients with diabetes who are lactating may require adjustments in Humalog dose, meal plan, or both.

Pediatric Use—Safety and effectiveness in patients less than 12 years of age have not been established.

ADVERSE REACTIONS: Clinical studies comparing Humalog with human regular insulin did not demonstrate a difference in frequency of adverse events between the two treatments.

Adverse events commonly associated with human insulin therapy include the following:

Body as a Whole—allergic reactions (see PRECAUTIONS)

Skin and Appendages—injection site reaction, lipodystrophy, pruritus, rash

Other—hypoglycemia (see WARNINGS and PRECAUTIONS)

OVERDOSAGE: Hypoglycemia may occur as a result of an excess of insulin relative to food intake, energy expenditure, or both. Mild episodes of hypoglycemia usually can be treated with oral glucose. Adjustments in drug dosage, meal patterns, or exercise may be needed. More severe episodes with coma, seizure, or neurologic impairment may be treated with intramuscular/subcutaneous glucagon or concentrated intravenous glucose. Sustained carbohydrate intake and observation may be necessary because hypoglycemia may recur after apparent clinical recovery.

CAUTION—Federal (USA) law prohibits dispensing without prescription.

Any change of insulin should be made cautiously and only under medical supervision. Changes in insulin strength, manufacturer, type (e.g., regular, NPH, analog), species (animal, human), or method of manufacture (rDNA versus animal-source insulin) may result in the need for a change in dosage.

having paper snow blown in your eyes." Fiennes, who built his reputation with psychologically torturous roles in such films as "Schindler's List" and "The English Patient," had it worse. Filming one particularly tense (and wet) scene on a British soundstage, he was drenched for nearly two weeks. "It took ages and ages and ages, and I got absolutely soaked," remembers Fiennes.

Although there's plenty of action, "in an odd way, style has a dominant role in the movie," says Chechik, a former magazine photographer. "I drew on a lot of my old fashion tricks. The lighting is very similar to [that in] the work I did for Italian Vogue." As important as style is the right tone. "It was always calm, always cool and with a sense of humor," says Fiennes.

Used to serious fare, the actor says he is happy to be portraying a character who isn't morose. "I wanted to play someone who at least walks into a room and likes who he is," he says. The change of pace was such a good experience, in fact, that Fiennes says he would gladly don Steed's pinstripes again. "I think it would be fun to do a sequel," he says. He has the clothes for it. "I got to keep some of the suits I wore, and I do wear them," he says. "I now have a whole new appreciation for tailored clothes."

But the actor was certainly not wearing tailored clothes in the first scene he shot with Thurman, who was one of the few Americans on the set. In the scene, Peel barges into the steam room of a stuffy British men's club to encounter her partner reading a newspaper. But Fiennes had a surprise for her. "I was terrified to open my mouth and sound like an idiot in front of a roomful of British people," Thurman says. "And there was Ralph's bare ass." Thurman turned beet red, but she carried on. "I reassured Mr. Fiennes that I was near-sighted and couldn't see any details," she says. Even in a sauna, Mrs. Emma Peel never sweats. ■

Just over 20 years ago, Patrick Macnee bumped into friend Peter O'Toole in a Toronto hotel lobby. As the actors rode up the elevator, O'Toole asked, "What are you doing, Macnee?"

"I'm doing The New Avengers," Macnee answered.

"But Patrick," O'Toole said, "you're always doing The Avengers."

O'Toole was so right. Now, 37 years after the first episode aired in England, Macnee, 76, is still doing The Avengers, with what he describes as a "demi-cameo" in the new movie and a recently published book entitled The Avengers and Me (TV Books).

Lately, Macnee has been promoting the video release of digitally remastered episodes of The Avengers from the 1967 season. (He and Rigg share in profits from the video sales.) Macnee, who now divides his time between Rancho Mirage and La Jolla, California, with his third wife, Baba, sat down recently with TV GUIDE to discuss why this series remains as stylish today as it was during the mod '60s. As does Macnee.

TV GUIDE: What was the influence for The Avengers? The series preceded the Bond movies.

Patrick Macnee: I love you for saying that. James Bond, The Saint and all those things came from books or theater or from whatever. The great thing about

The Avengers is its originality. Everybody says now, "Oh, it was something like the James Bond films." But when I say we were before any of that, they don't really understand. I made the Steed character up.

TVG: How did you develop him?

PM: The script said, "Steed stands there." That's all. I used to do these parts in Hollywood in the '50s and would support Ray Milland and Dane Clark, and they all played it with a trench coat and a cigarette. At first I played Steed like that, and the producer said, "You're fired by Tuesday unless you go away and think something up." So I took Steed back to the 18th century and deliberately played him like that. The cool exterior, the determined interior. That's why the clothes have that sort of allusion. And the umbrella was based on brains as opposed to brawn.

TVG: How did you come up with the idea of using the umbrella?

PM: I refused to carry a gun. They said to me, "Well, what would you carry?" And I thought for a second and said, "An umbrella." Which is ludicrous. On the other hand, I filled it with every sort of lethal object I could find. And I used it. I was saying, "I'm not going to carry a gun. I'm going to carry my brain." Now people are coming around to this. The X-Files and all those things, which are based on people thinking.

TVG: What do you think made The Avengers work?

PM: I think the real thing that made The Avengers work was the women. All of them. The fact that men lust after women in leather.

TVG: Do you think Mrs. Peel and Steed ever slept together?

PM: Definitely. I should say at least three or four times a week. The adrenaline of excitement always leads to sex. What would be very worrying is if we hadn't gone to bed. Can you imagine Emma Peel in a leather suit and Steed not going to bed with her?

Diana Rigg
Classic Act

When Diana Rigg made her debut on American television in 1966 as Emma Peel, she was already a highly regarded young talent in England's prestigious Royal Shakespeare Company, where she had enjoyed great success as Cordelia opposite Paul Scofield's King Lear. In fact, when the New York Times first wrote about her in The Avengers, the headline read FROM LEAR TO LEER, the pun a reference to Mrs. Peel's predilection for wearing the tightest of skintight leather outfits.

Rigg wasn't Macnee's only partner, but it is Rigg's 51 episodes that are considered the crème de la crème of the show's run. Since leaving The Avengers in 1968, Rigg has proved herself one of the finest actresses on the English—and American—stage. She was made a Dame by Queen Elizabeth in 1994. →

Then: Rigg and Macnee made the cover in 1967.

Rigg has been the host of PBS's Mystery! series since '89. Twice divorced, she has one daughter, Rachael Stirling, 21, who is entering her final year at the University of Edinburgh and plans to become an actress. A charming, forthright woman, Rigg, 60, spoke to TV GUIDE in London, where she was in the midst of rehearsing an eagerly anticipated production of Racine's "Phèdre."

TV GUIDE: Are you bothered that after all your accomplishments, what we're talking about is The Avengers?

Diana Rigg: Not at all. Think of the alternative: that I'd be ashamed of something and not want to talk about it.

TVG: Do you still get letters from Avengers fans?

DR: Absolutely. I have now [refused to sign] photographs of The Avengers, because it was so many years ago, and I feel such a fraud because, of course, I look different.

TVG: One French writer has recalled how as a kid, he fell so under the spell of The Avengers that his interests changed from mathematics to literature. The show changed his life.

DR: It's very interesting. As a child I was brought up on certain books—like "Winnie the Pooh" and the "Just So Stories" [by Rudyard Kipling]—and I introduced my daughter to them as part of handing over, if you like, a specific culture. I think TV in those early days served just that sort of purpose. Instead of the book, there was the TV for 11- and 12-year-olds to get fixated on. TVG: Good word, fixated, particularly for 11- and 12-year-olds, especially when the star is beautiful and dressed all in leather.

DR: [laughing] My mother used to answer my fan mail in those days, and she'd write back and tell the boys that her daughter was much too old for them and what they needed was a good run around the block.

TVG: Emma also appealed to women. In fact, the feminist writer Susan Brownmiller told TV GUIDE in 1970 that Emma Peel was the one "heroic woman" on television in those days.

DR: She's probably right, although it has nothing to do with me but with the character I played. Emma was uncompromisingly her own person, and she was clever, she could look after herself, but she wasn't a feminist in the strident sense of the word. Yes, she was an icon—and will remain so.

TVG: Which is ironic, because you once said that the '60s passed you by.

DR: The '60s largely were about drifting, and I was working 12-, 13-hour days in the studio.

TVG: But not getting rich.

DR: It was ridiculous. I was making 110 pounds per show [about $300 in 1966 currency]—10 pounds less than the cameraman. When I finally complained, the newspapers were emblazoned with stories about how greedy I was.

TVG: Fans still debate whether or not Steed and Mrs. Peel were sleeping together. What do you think?

DR: I don't think they did. I think it was one of those relationships where the promise [of something more] sustained it. It was one of those glorious, deeply intimate flirtations that spin off into infinity. —Vince Cosgrove

ONLINE TOON-IVERSE

People digging around for someplace to have a "dabba-doo" time tonight can strike bedrock on the Internet, where Fred Flintstone and other Cartoon Network titans recently set up shop. "We have had a really popular kids' site on America Online at keyword cartoon," says Cartoon Network executive vice president Rob Sorcher. But he says the stand-alone site (www.cartoonnetwork.com) is far more extensive, with original programming "for animation fans of all ages" that will be exclusive to the Web. This fall a series of interactive Web Premiere Toons will debut. For now, though, visitors can enjoy such features as the Official Space Ghost site and an "H.Q." section wherein Cartoon Network characters will answer fan queries via e-mail each week. Us? BY MICHAEL LOGAN

It's BOLD BUT NOT OLD

We've fallen in and out of love with The Bold and the Beautiful—daytime's most exasperatingly inconsistent soap—more times than we can count, but we're happy to report that the romance is back on. The CBS serial, which may soon best Baywatch as the most widely seen TV show on the planet, has been so cool and intriguing during these dog days of summer that we have taped every episode and zapped nothing. This is no small achievement: Mere months ago the quagmire of bad storylines (the "Psycho" House kidnapping, the evil twin from Greenland, the endless Brooke-Ridge-Taylor triangle) made B&B almost unviewable. Now every plot is a winner.

Chalk this up, in part, to some fresh detours by writer-producer Bradley Bell. The blossoming love affair between lonely matriarch Stephanie Forrester and weary, wife-whipped psychologist James Warwick (Emmy winners Susan Flannery and Ian Buchanan) is sweet, surprising and pure genius. It's also bloody dangerous: This romance has freaked Warwick's spouse, Sheila—played by Kimberlin Brown, the most underrated actress in soaps—into threatening to kill Stephanie's baby grandson (tricky stuff—how will we forgive the villainous Sheila this time?). The testicular-cancer plot—a daytime first—works amazingly well, thanks to sensitive scripting and Charles Grant's performance as the dying Grant Chambers. Bell has also ventured into new territory with his latest character, Dr. Pierce Peterson (Paul Satterfield), a world-famous, Anthony Robbins-type motivational guru, who may have ulterior designs on happily married heroine Taylor (Hunter Tylo).

But here's the real triumph: B&B's teens are a gas! While most soaps try unsuccessfully to create and cast young characters who don't make us puke, Bell has scored a quadruple bull's-eye. He recently aged the useless 8-year-old Bridget Forrester by a few years and tossed the character (now played by Agnes Bruckner) into a gripping teen-runaway plot (marred only by the bizarre Katherine Kelly Lang, who as Bridget's mother, Brooke, responds to every crisis by either squinting or pouting). Rick and his best pal, C.J., have also sprouted overnight and are now attractive, sharp, exciting young men, a new generation to move B&B into the new millennium (they're played, respectively, by Jacob Young and Mick Cain, both destined for major careers). And then there's easy, sleazy Amber Moore! Played by Adrienne Frantz, this white-trash babysitter (the kind we all went to school with) is pregnant after having sex with 16-year-old Rick, whom she devirginized, and her randy pal Raymond (played, in a huge casting coup, by R&B sensation Usher). Will the baby pop out white or black? This is story-weaving at its best, but B&B even at its worst never forgets the real reason audiences have been hooked on soaps since the '50s: We adore shocking behavior.

THE ROBINS REPORT

BY J. MAX ROBINS

Rivera's Ambitions: Upfront and Center

With a new show coming, Geraldo Rivera answers his critics, including the ones from down the hall

Geraldo Rivera wants nothing less than to be "the news anchor for the next millennium," a pronouncement that might not sit very well with the anchors of this millennium. As Rivera gears up for his new CNBC news program, Upfront Tonight, his often bristly relationships with some of his colleagues are getting even more combative. Openly hoping that his new show will catapult him to a top slot at NBC News, Rivera brashly announces, "I'm in the running for the center chair at the desk of the wise men."

To hear Rivera tell it, Upfront Tonight, which launches August 24, is a template for the newscast of the future that draws on a style from the past. "We're going retro," says Rivera. "The audience doesn't care about space-age presentation, they care about content." Rivera promises a newscast with passion, something of a return to his early days at WABC's Eyewitness News in New York City, where he established his reputation as a crusading reporter. In addition to Upfront and his other CNBC show, Rivera Live, Rivera's six-year $5 million-a-year contract with NBC calls for four network specials a year under the NBC News banner. The first, Black and Blue, airs next month and will examine relations between the African-American community and the police. Rivera will continue as a contributor to the Today show.

But if Upfront Tonight is Rivera's return to an earlier style, it's also his latest attempt to shed a more famous persona: the tabloid talk-show host of Geraldo, the Jerry Springer prototype that ended last May. Rivera wants to tell anybody who will listen that his days as poster boy for trash TV are over, but even he knows that some members of the news establishment won't buy what he's selling. Rivera knows he'll take criticism for hiring co-anchor Diane Dimond, who gained notoriety as a correspondent on Hard Copy and Extra.

But Dimond's critics might be the least of his worries. Proclaiming his interest in occupying the anchor chair of the NBC Nightly News can do little but rankle the network-news pantheon, particularly the chair's current inhabitant, veteran newsmen Tom Brokaw. When Rivera signed his NBC deal last November, Brokaw told the New York Times, "He does what he does, and I do what I do. There's very little common ground between us. That doesn't mean he doesn't have the right to do what he does."

During a guest spot last month on The Tonight Show With Jay Leno, Rivera chided Brokaw about the cold shoulder. He said the atmosphere at NBC Nightly News was "like a country club or fraternity" and indirectly referred to Brokaw as "a top banana in the middle with the in-crowd around him, and they decide who's in and who's out." Leno, knowing the banana in question was Brokaw, asked Rivera if he thought he would ever make it to NBC Nightly News. "There's still time," Rivera replied, laughing. "Tom, you're great. Tom, you and me, we could be tight."

Rivera: Moving Upfront

Despite Rivera's overtures, Brokaw is unlikely to welcome him into NBC's inner circle. As both anchor and managing editor, Brokaw has made it clear he doesn't favor Rivera's contributions and, say NBC News sources, doesn't even want promos for Upfront Tonight or Rivera Live airing during his newscast.

"I'm acutely aware that in the nine months I've worked for NBC News there have been no promos for my show that have run during the NBC Nightly News [broadcasts]," says Rivera. "I have excellent relations with the folks at Today: Katie Couric, Matt Lauer and [executive producer] Jeff Zucker. It's exactly the opposite of what I've gotten from Brokaw. [With Today] it's been 'Come on in, welcome aboard,' rather than 'His promos won't air on my network' or 'His pieces won't air on my show.' Those are bizarre statements to make, like prior censorship. I can't imagine how actions like that can be justified, but I'm going to be very patient. I hope that if I hang out long enough and I'm quiet enough, it will evolve into a more collegial kind of relationship. But I don't expect it."

Given Rivera's idea of quiet, he's wise not to look for Brokaw's open arms. And the truth is, Brokaw (who declined comment) is not alone in taking umbrage at the reemergence of Rivera as a legitimate network journalist. Some reporters suggest that Rivera, covering Bill Clinton's recent trip to China for Today, snagged an exclusive interview with the president because of his partisan reporting, and even Couric and Zucker thought Rivera went too far on a subsequent Today show when he called Clinton "the most maligned and assailed man in the history of the executive office" and questioned how Congress could impeach Clinton for "doing something that virtually every member [of the House and Senate] has done at some time in their lives."

Rivera's concession that he "was too over the top" in his Clinton comments probably won't appease his competitors, many of whom can't or won't think of Rivera as anything but the tabloid grandstander whose nose was busted by skinheads and who wrote a tell-all autobiography (unsubtly titled Exposing Myself) that detailed his sexual encounters with the famous and not so famous.

"I wear my heart on my sleeve," Rivera says. "My hair is too long. I'm an ex-hippie. I have tattoos. I'm Puerto Rican with a mustache and a broken nose. I don't look like those guys. I don't hang out with those guys. That's why they don't like me."

Well, that might be part of it. An explosive interview coming up in the October issue of Playboy (conducted by TV GUIDE's Greg Fagan) will do little to win Rivera the affection of his colleagues. While he offers left-handed compliments to ABC News chief White House correspondent Sam Donaldson, 20/20 anchor Barbara Walters and CNN's Christiane Amanpour, Rivera takes direct aim at ABC World News Tonight anchor Peter Jennings. Conceding the anchor has "paid his dues," Rivera says he still thinks of Jennings as "little Petey, whose father [a prominent Canadian journalist] put him on the air." In a double strike at Jennings and Washington Post columnist Richard Cohen, who has been critical of Rivera in the past, Rivera calls Cohen "the sissy who got involved with Jennings's wife." He later says that the only way Jennings would venture to Harlem for a story is with "six bodyguards."

Comments like that suggest he is in no hurry to make nice at the press club. The opinionated anti-establishment Rivera relishes his bad-boy image: "The anchor of the future, instead of being a moderator, will be the chief reporter. It will be much more of an activist role."

SUSAN STEWART'S HITS & MISSES

Brief Reviews of This Week's Notable Programs

THE E! TRUE HOLLYWOOD STORY (Sun., E!) 12LDS In a perfect fit of style and subject, this profile of Traci Lords delves shallowly into the life of the girl who made scores of porn flicks before anybody figured out she started at 15.
Story features many interviews with male directors, writers and actors who damply describe Traci's appeal ("She looked wet, gooey..."). It's a cheap peep show, mildly titillating but revealing little of the mystery behind Lords's mutation from young teen to porn
queen to hard-bitten Hollywood starlet. My score (0-10): 2

YOU BE THE JUDGE (Sun., NBC) 12 This cheesy
special is more high school debate than people's court. Its host is Law & Order star Jerry Orbach, who struts about in a trench coat like Joe Friday. He introduces six short films, each taking a viewpoint on one of three issues: guns at home, sexual harassment at work, police chases. Far from getting to the truth of these hot-button issues, Judge merely emphasizes how relative truth is and how well the documentary form can distort a given set of facts. Judge is a civics lesson all right, but not the kind it means to be. My score: 3

NIGHTMARE IN BIG SKY COUNTRY (Mon., LIF) Strained and strident by turns, Patricia Wettig struggles through this cable drama as a judge hounded by right-wing extremists. She stands up to them, they threaten her home and children, she makes speeches. You kind of wish the Montana Freeman would shoot Wettig, but don't blame her for that. She's a good actress trapped in a dogmatic nightmare of a movie. The fact-based Country begins on fertile ground, concerned with such matters as civil liberty and mothers with careers, but the plot evaporates in arid generalities. Wettig never has to use her gun; all her hot air simply blows the bad guys away. My score: 4

UPRIGHT CITIZENS BRIGADE (Wed., COM) After years as a hit on the comedy-club circuit, the sketch troupe

Cheryl and Jordan Ladd in Every Mother's Worst Fear

Upright Citizens Brigade gets its own series. The first episode is absurdist and even funny. The Citizens play characters ranging from real estate agents to the Unabomber, who has a fun-filled sleep-
over with a Girl Scout.
The interlocking skits are rife with non sequiturs, paranoia and plain old silliness. Not all of them work, but all of them are weird, and that's entertainment too. My score: 7

EVERY MOTHER'S WORST FEAR (Wed., USA) When Cheryl Ladd's daughter is kidnapped by an Internet stalker, Ladd takes a crash course in computers and surfs her way to the rescue. Her daughter is played by real-life daughter Jordan Ladd, who weeps with sufficient ardor to assure more victim roles in future TV-movies. Ted McGinley does a fine William Devane impersonation as the bad guy. But there's no soul in this machine. No drama, either.
Midway through the grueling search for their daughter, Ladd meets her ex-husband at an airport and asks, "How was your flight?" Dull. My score: 3

Confidentially speaking about TV tales

Our collection of TV's most durable legends ["TV Confidential," July 25] prompted many readers to write of their own recollections. Some cleared the air, some added to the confusion, but the volume of letters assured us that these TV stories will never die.

Your "TV Confidential!" article was very funny, but you left out one of the newest and most ridiculous rumors—the kid who played Paul [Josh Saviano] on The Wonder Years has grown up to become Marilyn Manson. And haven't you heard the one about Captain Kangaroo being Ozzy Osbourne's dad?

Matthew D. Wilson
Fort Smith, Ark.

Son of a Green Jeans

The reason Ted Nugent isn't responding to rumors about being the son of Captain Kangaroo's Mr. Green Jeans is because it's not his rumor. Any rock fan knows it was Frank Zappa that was dogged by this story for years. Zappa unintentionally brought it upon himself when he recorded a song in the late '60s called "Son of Mr. Green Genes." Besides, isn't it obvious that Ted Nugent was raised by wolves?

A Soupy mess

As producer of the show in which Soupy Sales asked kids to send him money, allow me to correct a number of inaccuracies: 1) Yes, it happened; 2) Soupy received nowhere near $80,000—rather two $1 dollar bills, plus some Monopoly money; 3) Soupy used this New Year's Day gag in every local market his show originated from in previous years; 4) Soupy was not suspended—but I was; 5) He promised to send a postcard from Buenos Aires, not Puerto Rico.

Bob Cahn
Carmel, N.Y.

Editor's Note: Soupy Sales admits he only got a few bucks in real money, the rest in Monopoly money. He also admits he used the gag once before, but maintains that the punch line was Puerto Rico and that he got a two-week suspension while Cahn got axed. Cahn insists he returned to the show after his suspension and was reassigned six months later.

Well, Gaw-lee!

Re: Your article about Jim Nabors and Rock Hudson. Doesn't anyone remember the joke that started the rumor? "If Rock Hudson married Gomer Pyle, would his name be Rock Pyle?"

Kiss and tell

I enjoyed the entire "TV Confidential!" article. As for Dizzy Dean's remarks about the couple in the bleachers, I was watching the game that day. Around the third inning, the camera panned to a couple covered with a blanket. Later, Dizzy said to Pee Wee Reese, "I finally figured out what it is they're doing out there. He's kissing

The cat in the lap

I remember the "Would you like to pet my p——?" episode of Johnny Carson's Tonight Show. The guest was Raquel Welch and her cat was a white Persian.

Any real fan of TV talk knows that Zsa Zsa Gabor's fabled feline exchange took place—not on Carson's couch, but in Merv Griffin's chairs.

Melanie L. Knox
Miami, Fla.

Editor's Note: Arnold Palmer's representative (who corrects our story by saying Palmer did appear on Carson's show) assures us Palmer's wife never graced Johnny's couch. Carson's folks report that the wives of Martin, Nicklaus and Trevino never appeared either. And Steve Allen says it didn't happen on his show. As for the cat conundrum, Welch offers an adamant "never happened," through her publicist. So does Merv Griffin. Either this proves the fallibility of human memory, or it's one of the greatest media misunderstandings since War of the Worlds.

ALL MY CHILDREN Last week (Aug. 10-14), Brooke took the stand. The testimony of a surprise witness threatened to put Brooke away for murder. Dimitri made a shocking admission. Hayley and Mateo took a trip to avoid the carnival.

ANOTHER WORLD Scott kidnapped Amanda; Gary offered to help Cameron find her. Marley undermined Donna to Vicky, hinting that Donna was unstable. Matt told Sofia that his wedding to Lila was off.

AS THE WORLD TURNS A mechanic sabotaged the Valetta's engine and it exploded during Nancy's 80th-birthday party. Georgia revealed to Sam that she is Sam's daughter. Brad told Camille the truth behind his father's death. David rejected Molly at the altar.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL Taylor remained skeptical about Pierce's controversial curing of a patient. Rick told Brooke about Amber's pregnancy. Sheila was sentenced with no possibility of parole; James got custody of Mary.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES Sami was wounded by the hit man. Meanwhile, Franco got together with Candy the stripper. Ms. Faversham invited Hope to Bulgaria, but Lucille (Elsa Raven) was determined to prevent her from going.

GENERAL HOSPITAL Brenda's mother, Veronica (Jennifer Hetrick), confronted Jax. Stefan admitted that Laura was on the parapet the night of Katherine's death; and Alexis and Nikolas provided revealing testimony.

Candice Daly in
The Young and the Restless

GUIDING LIGHT Reva and Josh were deeply affected by Dolly's death. Ben warned Rick about trying to take Kevin away from Blake and Ross. Dinah's plan to humiliate Sean and Cassie backfired on her.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE Todd's second personality, "Tom," was revealed. Joey rescued Barbara on the docks. Asa pressured

Bo to accept his job offer. Tea and Roseanne had an awkward reunion.

PORT CHARLES At the cabin, a bear chased Ellen and Lucy, then Lucy panicked and got lost in the mountains trying to help a feverish Ellen. Julie was arrested for murder. Kevin suspected that Lark set up Julie. Later, Lark paid off a homeless woman.

SUNSET BEACH Gregory and A.J. took a helicopter to the capsized ship, where the struggle to survive reached an explosive climax. Trey was in critical condition and required plasma from his mother; Olivia stepped forward.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS Diane shocked Victor with her demands, then showed up for the taping of Leanna Love's TV talk show. When Nikki began to have suspicions about Veronica, Veronica decided that Nikki must die.

FROM THE SAHALEE COUNTRY CLUB
Davis Love III

The final weekend of play in Redmond, Wash.
This is the first major held in the Pacific Northwest since 1946, and the characteristic terrain of the area is certainly on display at this course. Commentator Peter Kostis says that while the U.S. Open is known for its difficult rough, this year's PGA may set new standards.
"The rough at Sahalee is 80 feet tall," he jokes.
"Every fairway is tree-lined." Kostis also says Sahalee won't be universally appreciated by the players. "This is a very claustrophobic course, and some players rebel against that."
Last year's event was won by Davis Love III at Winged Foot in Mamaroneck, N.Y. (Live)

NFL football returns to CBS, as San Francisco tackles Seattle in preseason action. (Live)
Home to the NFC from 1970 to 1993, CBS will have "a very different presentation" this time around, says CBS Sports president Sean McManus. Among the changes: 3-D-looking graphics and new animation. But the biggest change is that CBS will now broadcast AFC games as part of an eight-year, $4 billion package that formerly belonged to rival NBC. Headlining the broadcast teams are Greg Gumbel and Phil Simms. Other pairings include Verne Lundquist/Randy Cross, Kevin Harlan/Sam Wyche, Gus Johnson/Steve Tasker and Ian Eagle/Mark May.

THE SEASON OPENER

The charming cartoon launches a seventh season with new episodes.

The highly rated series has become a favorite with both kids and their parents since its 1991 debut, inspiring a stage show and an upcoming feature film. Kicking off the new season: "Baby Sitting Fluffy," in which Chuckie's dad is asked to look after Angelica's malevolent pet. The task falls to the babies, who run themselves ragged trying to please the fussy kitty. That's followed by "Sleep Trouble," which finds Stu's well-intentioned bedtime story about the "Sandman" backfiring when Tommy and Chuckie become too scared to sleep. Voices include E.G. Daily

A SUPERSTAR'S ASCENT

Leonardo DiCaprio

"[The special] is really a celebration of Leo [DiCaprio] and the Leo phenomenon," says Eytan Keller, senior vice president of Reality Programming and Specials for the Fox Family Channel.

MTV's Idols hosts this look at the 23-year-old heartthrob, who made such a splash in "Titanic" that merchandising of his image has extended to pins, air fresheners and hubcaps. The hour features footage from fan-club meetings; a visit to DiCaprio's boyhood home in Los Angeles; a survey of Leo Web sites and on-line games; interviews with a former drama teacher and school principal; Leo trivia; and clips from the actor's film and TV appearances. INSIDE THE SUNKEN LINER

Submersible Nautilus

This underwater expedition goes inside the ill-fated Titanic to better understand what caused its tragic sinking. Investigators will attempt to go further into the great ship than anyone has previously ventured. Using robotic cameras, they plan to zoom in on the bow, the badly damaged stern and the series of tiny "wounds" inflicted by the iceberg that doomed the liner once thought to be unsinkable. Also: a survey of the wreck site captured by digital cameras to create a 3-D image of Titanic; a gathering of steel from the wreckage to determine if it was flawed; and a study of the microorganisms that are eating away the ship's iron. SALUTING THE SULTAN OF SWAT

An insightful portrait of George Herman Ruth's astonishing exploits on and off the field.

"How many people get to go through life doing exactly what they want to, and living life to the fullest as he did?" asks producer Rick Bernstein. "Our goal was to try to explain why this man is so remembered 50 years after his death." The profile includes rare film clips as well as interviews with former teammates, broadcasters and Ruth's adopted daughter. There are also comments from "everyday people who had a passing moment with him 60 or 70 years ago and tell about it so vividly, you realize the impression he had upon them," says Bernstein. (1:00)

Douglas, Bening

M* THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT
SUN. 7 PM (TBS)

Michael Douglas and Annette Bening bring sophisticated wit and charm to director Rob Reiner's 1995 comedy about a widowed Chief Executive and his courtship with a lobbyist.

As President, Andrew Shepherd (Douglas) is immensely popular (he has a 63% approval rating). As a man, he's a lonely father struggling to raise a daughter. Those struggles multiply when his romance with lobbyist Sydney Ellen Wade (Bening) becomes fodder for both the press and an ambitious rival senator (Richard Dreyfuss)—precipitating a rapid drop in the polls. Rothschild: Michael J. Fox. MacInerney: Martin Sheen. Janie, Samantha Mathis. (2:30)

TOGETHER AGAIN?
Thomas Calabro,
Josie Bissett

Will Jane Mancini return to her ex, the skirt-chasing, Jane's-sister-marrying, Michael? In this episode, the exes meet at their college reunion. "Jane and Michael believe...they're each other's true love," says Josie Bissett. "Always have been, always will be." Bissett, who returns to her role, hopes to keep Jane "a sweet, nice, honorable character," and says viewers will see "a softer side to Michael." But Michael's portrayal, Thomas Calabro, hopes it's "just long enough that I can turn meaner than I ever was before." Meanwhile, a well-connected former patient (James Farentino) agrees to Peter's request for a favor regarding Amanda. (1:00)

Debut: A cable series from executive producer Lewis Chesler (The Hitchhiker) that centers on cautionary tales of the future. Set in a city known as "Betaville," the series is based on current and classic science fiction. A short story by Alan Dean Foster inspired the opener, in which a telepathic detective named Angel Cardenas (Steven Bauer) investigates a holographic Virgin Mary (Suzy Joachim). She appears before—and tries to convert—merchants who refuse a priest's request for donations, none of the "non-believers" survive her visit. However, when Cardenas encounters the holy image, he thinks she may be the real deal. (1-00)

Recommended Viewing...

☐ Movie: "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid." Paul Newman and Robert Redford are dazzling as the legendary outlaws in the ★★☆☆ 1969 Western. Strother Martin leads a colorful supporting cast. —7:05 PM, 10 PM AMC

Also of Note...

☐ A NewsRadio repeat features a cameo by Civil War documentarian Ken Burns. Fittingly, the plot finds warring Dave and Lisa trying to be civil with one another. —7:30 PM 5 16 33 3:30

☐ Movie: Patty Duke plays a mother forced "To Face Her Past" in an emotional 1996 TV-drama about half sisters (Tracey Gold, Gabrielle Carteris), each unaware of the other's existence. —8 PM 2 15 22

☐ In a repeat, Patti LuPone appears as Frasier's Aunt Zora, who holds a grudge against him for counseling her son to pursue a career in juggling rather than medicine. —8 PM 5 16 33 3:30

☐ The opener of Any Day Now, a new drama series set in the Deep South, addresses racial issues with sensitivity and perception. Costars Annie Potts and Lorraine Toussaint complement each other nicely. See the Close-up on p. 107. —8 PM LIF 3:30

☐ The Making of Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid goes behind the scenes of the 1969 Western blockbuster. —9 PM AMC 3:30

☐ Lifetime premieres two original sitcoms: Maggie, starring Ann Cusack as a housewife with a very active imagination, and Oh Baby, with Cynthia Stevenson as a thirtysomething career woman who decides to start a family via artificial insemination. See the Close-up on p. 109. —9 PM LIF 3:30

INSIGHT ON RACE RELATIONS

Lorraine Toussaint,
Annie Potts

Debut: The complex relationship between two women—one white, one black—provides absorbing drama in this new series. It's set mostly in present-day Birmingham, Ala., where a visiting lawyer named Rene (Lorraine Toussaint) is reunited with her childhood friend, Mary Elizabeth (Annie Potts). Together, they share poignant memories...and painful recriminations over the incident that split them apart in their late teens. But the greatest resonance in the opener comes from telling flashbacks to the women's preteen years in the early 1960s, a turbulent time in segregated Birmingham. (1:00)

Cynthia Stevenson

Debut: Lifetime rolls out its first original sitcoms, both centering on women who are reassessing their lives.

• Ann Cusack plays Maggie, a highly imaginative woman whose 40th birthday and an unexpected attraction to a charming co-worker prompt her to rethink her 19-year marriage to a preoccupied cardiologist (John Getz).

• Oh Baby stars Cynthia Stevenson as a thirty-something career woman named Tracy. When her long-time boyfriend (Daniel Hugh Kelly) tells her marriage isn't in their future, Tracy decides to buck convention and start a family by herself—via artificial insemination.
[Matt Roush reviews both series on p. 10.]

WEDNESDAY

Recommended Viewing...

☐ Cupid's handiwork is all over this engaging Valentine's Day-themed repeat of The Drew Carey Show, as one surprise proposal leads to a second equally surprising one. SCTV vet Eugene Levy guest stars as Mimi's psychiatrist. —8 PM (7) (21) (33) (34)

Also of Note...

☐ Nana Mouskouri: Concert for Peace showcases the Greek vocalist in her first nationally televised U.S. appearance. —7:30 PM (11)

☐ Movie: Cheryl Ladd experiences "Every Mother's Worst Fear" in this 1998 cable drama about a teen girl (Ladd's daughter, Jordan) who falls for an online sicko (Ted McGinley) and gets trapped in an Internet sex ring. —8 PM (USA)

☐ On a Whose Line Is It Anyway? sketch, host Drew Carey draws laughs as a TV newscaster trying to describe images projected behind him that viewers can see, but he can't. —8:30 PM (7) (21) (33) (34)

☐ Martina McBride visits Celebrity Homes and Hideaways, calling on Barbara Mandrell, Bryan White and Wynonna in this series debut. —9 PM (TNN) (2)

☐ Patti LaBelle Live! One Night Only: In a fantastic performance taped in June, the songstress teams with Mariah Carey and with Luther Vandross for two crowd-pleasing duets. Vandross also performs the title track of his new CD, "I Know." —9:55 PM (3)

☐ Self-defense takes center stage in Masters of the Martial Arts Presented by Wesley Snipes, which honors grand masters, including Jackie Chan, Cynthia Rothrock, Bennie "The Jet" Urquidez and Billy Blanks. Snipes ("Blade") heads the celebrity guest list. —10 PM (TNT)

Educational/Informational Programming

To Our Readers: TV Guide uses the symbol EI to identify shows that programmers deem of educational or informational value for children. Under new FCC requirements, all local broadcast stations must eventually air three such hours of children's programming each week. When stations provide the information to us, TV Guide will label these shows to help you identify the best viewing choices for your family.

Jennifer Aniston

Jennifer Aniston is charming as an ad exec in this engaging 1997 romance.

Aniston plays Kate Mosely, a single woman who keeps losing promotions to her more "settled" co-workers. To land a big account, Kate manufactures a beau (Jay Mohr of "Mafia!") and tells her bosses that the total stranger pictured with her in a photo is her fiancé. When the couple is invited out with office bigwigs, Kate scrambles to find the man and tries to get him to agree to a charade that's "something right out of The Patty Duke Show." Rated PG-13 for adult situations, language. Sam. Kevin Bacon. (1:45)

FRI. 10:30 PM HBO

Return: The Emmy-winning stand-up comic opens a third season of his variety show.

Although his career is booming with a hot CD ("Roll with the New"), a bestseller (Rock This!), and box-office success ("Lethal Weapon 4"), Rock is sticking to the show's established format. "He loves it the way it is," says HBO Original Programming vice president Nancy Geller, whose network recently signed Rock to a three-year deal. That means a continuation of Rock's entertaining interviews with guests. "He's got something to say to them and wants to have a good seven or eight-minute conversation or debate," Geller explains. Scheduled music guest: "trip-hop" guru Tricky.

TV GUIDE'S MOVIE RATINGS

Theatrical movies are indicated in the daily listings by the symbol M plus a rating of ★★★★ (excellent), ★★★ (good), ★★ (fair) or ★ (poor). Our evaluations are based on a number of factors, including a consensus of leading critics, quality of cast and director, awards earned and box-office performance. Movies may be edited for television; our ratings are based on the original, complete film. An M without stars indicates an unrated theatrical movie. TV GUIDE does not evaluate a movie if the criteria can't be applied because too few facts are known (example: a minor foreign film); or if the film is made-for-television (indicated with MV) or direct-to-video (MV).

TV GUIDE'S MOVIE SYMBOLS AND RATINGS

Theatrical movies are indicated in the daily listings by the symbol [M] plus a rating of [stars] (excellent), [stars] (good), [stars] (fair) or [stars] (poor). Our evaluations are based on a number of factors, including a consensus of leading critics, quality of cast and director, awards earned and box-office performance. Movies may be edited for television; our ratings are based on the original, complete film. An [M] without stars indicates an unrated theatrical movie. TV GUIDE does not evaluate movies if the criteria can't be applied because too few facts are known (example: a minor foreign film), or if the film is made-for-television (indicated with [TV]) or direct-to-video ([DVD]).

PARENTAL GUIDANCE

The official MPAA content rating (G, PG, PG-13, R, or NC-17) is provided for every film that has received one (NR: not rated). We also offer advisories about content (adult themes, sexual situations, strong language, violence or nudity), but parents should be aware that films containing adult themes or sexual situations frequently involve nudity, even though our advisory may not explicitly say so.

THE TV GUIDE HOROSCOPE

BY SALLY BROMPTON

♈ ARIES (March 21-April 20): Don't dwell on your problems when there are so many positive celestial influences urging you to express your individuality. Even financial worries should take second place when it comes to having fun. Happiness is infectious—spread it around.

For your extended Aries horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5558*

♉ TAURUS (April 21-May 21): Don't use domestic pressures as your excuse for failing to address a financial issue that needs immediate attention. With Venus and Pluto linked on Monday, you should be able to overcome all objections, so long as you make sure you know what you want.

For your extended Taurus horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5559*

♊ GEMINI (May 22-June 21): This looks like a busy week and you need a clear idea of your priorities if you are to accomplish all that has to be done. Don't let a change in plans cause problems—be ready to go with the flow. With so many options opening up, a decisive approach is vital.

For your extended Gemini horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5560*

♋ CANCER (June 22-July 23): Finances are the dominating factor. With Mars leaving your birth sign on Thursday, be careful not to antagonize someone who could improve your situation. Check the credentials of anyone who promises help.

For your extended Cancer horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5561*

♌ LEO (July 24-Aug. 23): A business associate or loved one is about to surprise you and you may have to adapt your plans or behavior. That shouldn't be a problem since it seems nothing is beyond your reach. Other people's moods and motives seem to be shifting—don't allow yours to.

For your extended Leo horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5562*

♍ VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23): You are unlikely to be at your most dynamic this week, but don't be ashamed about it. Everyone needs time for their deeper needs. Avoid the madding crowd and make space for the people who matter most.

For your extended Virgo horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5563*

♎ LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23): You hate being told what to do—especially by those ill-qualified to judge. However, avoid speaking your mind. Aspects to your tactful ruler Venus indicate a diplomatic approach will get you further in the long run.

For your extended Libra horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5564*

♏ SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22): Your ruler Pluto, planet of transformation, linked to Venus, planet of negotiation, points to a time of changing aims, values or status. Much can be done this week to ease your route into the future. Others may offer advice but remember that it's your life.

For your extended Scorpio horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5565*

♐ SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): You can get a new house, new job, even a new partner, but you can never escape what's in your head and your heart. The planets are urging you to make fundamental changes to your life, but be sure that any changes are for the right reasons.

For your extended Sagittarius horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5566*

♑ CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20): You are generally good at handling finances, but you seem to have reached an impasse in relation to a business venture. Since things should clear up soon, it would be a mistake to rush matters. Avoid the advice of amateurs when there are experts on hand.

For your extended Capricorn horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5567*

♒ AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19): With fiery Mars entering the partnership angle of your chart this week, tempers are liable to be frayed. Far better to overlook a slight than risk upsetting someone close to you. However stormy the waters appear, there are calmer seas ahead.

For your extended Aquarius horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5568*

♓ PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20): A great deal seems to be expected of you right now and expectations will only increase. With so many challenges ahead, you need to watch your health and your temper. You can achieve a lot with the right attitude.

For your extended Pisces horoscope, call: 1-900-825-5569*
